GUEST OF HONOUR AND KEYNOTE SPEAKER

Guest of Honour

Mr. Clarence Gama

A visionary leader advancing Malawi's ICT landscape. Current CEO of NICO Technologies and President of the ICT Association of Malawi – ICTAM.

He is committed to building a resilient, innovative digital economy while empowering professionals to thrive in a competitive global tech environment.

Keynote Speaker

Dr Becky Jones-Phillips

Dr. Becky Jones-Phillips is the Director of Enterprise and Innovation (E&I) at the Liverpool School of Tropical Medicine (LSTM), where she leads efforts to accelerate translational research and bring health innovations to market. Her team also develops commercial strategies and builds innovation capacity in low- and middle-income countries (LMICs), focusing on areas like clinical trials, manufacturing, and regulation. She chairs LSTM's Gender Equity Action Committee and leads the Athena Swan Self-Assessment Team, promoting gender equity across the institution. With a background in immunoparasitology and experience in the commercial diagnostics sector, Becky is Principal Investigator on three Research England-funded projects—FLIGHT, SIGHT, and BRITE—and contributes to several others, focusing on implementation and market strategy for public health innovations.

KEY SPEAKERS

Dr. Joseph Nagoli

Joseph Nagoli is the Senior Research Coordinator for IFPRI and Policy Hub Leader for the CGIAR in Malawi. He holds a PhD in Urban and Rural Development (Anthropology) from the Swedish University of Agricultural Sciences (SLU) and an MSc in Agriculture, Environment and Development from the University of East Anglia. With over 20 years of research experience and more than 50 publications, his work focuses on political ecology, food systems, natural resources governance, and the blue economy in East and Central Africa and Asia.

Prior to IFPRI, Joseph served as Director of Knowledge and Learning and Acting Director General of the National Planning Commission, where he led the drafting of Malawi 2063 and its first 10-Year Implementation Plan. He helped re-establish the SADC Planning Entities Platform and co-chaired Malawi's Food Systems Transformation Coordination Steering Committee. He also worked with WorldFish Malawi, developing fisheries and aquaculture programs, including improved local tilapia and nutrition-focused fish diets.

Prof. Kondwani Jambo

Professor Kondwani Jambo is a Professor of Immunology and Infection at the Liverpool School of Tropical Medicine, with my research primarily based at the Malawi-Liverpool-Wellcome Research Programme (MLW). I serve as the Hub Lead of the Discovery Research Support Hub and am also the President of the Science For All Foundation, initiatives committed to advancing equitable access to science and research opportunities across Africa. My research focuses on understanding the pathogenesis of mucosal-acquired pathogens that pose serious health challenges to low- and middle-income countries, including HIV, Streptococcus pneumoniae, Mycobacterium tuberculosis, and emerging pathogens. We collect samples from the nose, lungs, gut, and genital tract to investigate mucosal immunity, leveraging advanced technologies such as single-cell sequencing, spatial biology, multiplex serology, and flow cytometry. Our vision is to develop, adapt, and optimise immunisation strategies that reduce the transmission and impact of mucosal-acquired infections. Over the course of my career, I have been honoured to receive several prestigious fellowships, including the MRC/FCDO African Research Leader Award, the Wellcome Intermediate Fellowship in Public Health and Tropical Medicine, and, most recently, the Calestous Juma Science Leadership Fellowship from the Gates Foundation.

ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE FOR SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT: HYPE OR HOPE?	DAY TWO: 12TH AUGUST 2025
---	---------------------------

BRIEF DESCRIPTION

The workshop “Artificial Intelligence for Sustainable Development: Hype or Hope?” Led by Chikumbutso Walani (MUBAS Design Studio Engineer) is designed for researchers, students, practitioners, and policymakers, it will explore AI’s applications, potential, and limitations in African development contexts through presentations, case studies, group discussions, and debates.

Participants will gain an understanding of AI fundamentals, real-world African use cases, ethical considerations, and a framework for responsible AI adoption. The interactive format will encourage critical thinking and collaborative problem-solving, aiming to equip attendees with practical insights and resources for applying AI in sustainable development.

WORKSHOP 3: ROOM NUMBER 244 (ENTREPRENEURSHIP)

DAY TWO: 12TH AUGUST 2025

BRIEF DESCRIPTION

This workshop offers final-year MUBAS students with entrepreneurial ambitions a platform to pitch their business ideas for expert review. It aims to refine their concepts and operational plans, preparing them to confidently approach potential funders.

By presenting ideas formalised in reviewed business plans, participants will receive valuable feedback to strengthen their proposals for commercialisation into spin-out companies. The session targets final-year students with strong business prospects, with the possibility of potential funders in attendance.
